Verse 1:
 The fisherman used to dive into running water
 And take a shining sixpence from the floor.
 Now he's waiting for the salmon of knowledge
 To help him wade out from the shore.

Verse 2:
 He looks down to the lake on a sunlit morning,
 Loves the ancient world that is within.
 The surface shadow is his simple warning,
 Transformation must begin.

Chorus:
 Close your eyes, listen to the river.
 Open your heart, listen to the river.
 Close your eyes, listen to the river.

F6 Em7 D Dsus2 Gadd9

Verse 3:
 The rain pours down on Barley Harbour
 As expectation fills the pier.
 The fisherman looks out on the horizon
 The salmon of knowledge is coming here.

Verse 4:
 Let the bells ring out in the heartland,
 Let all the poets come to pen.
 May they write in praise of celebration,
 The salmon goes upstream once again.

Chorus.
